Introduction
In this fun group activity, students play a game where they guess 'Wh' questions from short answers written by other students.

Procedure

- Introduction
  In this fun group activity, students play a game where they guess 'Wh' questions from short answers written by other students.

- Preparation
  Divide the class into groups of three.

- Procedure
  Give each student a part of the worksheet.

- Tell the students not to show their worksheets to each other.

- The students write answers to the questions on the worksheet in the spaces provided.

- Inform the students that they should write down a one or two word answer for each question.

- Students should also write clearly so other students are able to read their answers.

- When the students have finished, have them cut or tear the worksheet along the dotted line, so the questions and answers are separate.

- Explain that the students are going to play a game where they guess 'Wh' questions from answers written by other students.

- One student begins by placing their answers on the desk for the other two students to see.

- These two students read the first answer and take it in turns to guess the question.

- It's not important that the students say the exact wording of the question, but the question should be grammatically correct with the same tense and meaning.

- The first student to guess the question wins one point.

- If the two students are having problems thinking of the right question, the student who wrote the answer can give them a clue, e.g. 'It's a question about learning'. 'It's a question about the past', etc.

- This process continues until all three students’ questions have been guessed correctly.

- The student with the most points at the end of the game wins.
