Introduction

In this intriguing role-play activity, students play an air travel board game where they role-play asking for air travel information and practice booking airline tickets at a travel agency.

Procedure

Divide the students into groups of four.

Give each group a copy of the game board, a dice and two counters.

Explain that the centre of the game board shows air travel information about return flights from London to Perth. There are three possible flights and each flight shows the departure and arrival time, stopover, flight time, cost and baggage allowance.

Give the students time to read the information in the centre of the board and ask questions about vocabulary or abbreviations.

In pairs, the students then take it in turns to roll the dice and move their counter along the board. Each time a pair lands on a square, they role-play the situation.

One student takes on the role of a customer and the other is a travel agent.

If the square contains an information symbol, the customer asks for travel information about one of the flights. If not, the customer’s task is to book a certain type of flight.

The travel agent refers to the air travel information in the centre of the board during each role-play.

The first pair of students to reach the finish wins.

Afterwards, invite pairs to role-play some of the situations in front of the class and give feedback.
