Level

Intermediate (B1)

Time

30 minutes

Introduction

In this comparatives board game, students change adjectives into their comparative forms and then use the comparative adjectives to ask and answer conversation questions.

Procedure

Before starting the game, review the rules for forming comparatives: add -er to short adjectives (clean > cleaner), use more with longer adjectives (delicious > more delicious), and remember irregular forms (good > better).

Next, divide the students into pairs.

Give each pair a copy of the game board, a dice and two counters.

Students place their counters on the start square.

Students then take turns rolling the dice and moving their counter along the board.

When a student lands on a square, they change the adjective in the conversation question into its comparative form and then ask the question to their partner.

For example, if a student lands on 'Are you ... (happy) now or when you were a child?', they should ask 'Are you happier now or when you were a child?'

Their partner then answers the question in sentence form, explaining any reasons in more detail.

The two students continue taking turns to ask and answer the comparative conversation questions until one student reaches the finish. That student wins the game.

Afterwards, have a class feedback session to review the students' answers to the questions. Any interesting answers can then be discussed in more detail.
