Introduction

In this generalization words games, students race to match specific statements with general ones.

Procedure

Divide the students into groups of three.

If you have extra students, have some groups of four.

Give each group a set of general sentence cards and specific sentence cards.

The six general sentence cards are spread out face-up on the desk, within easy reach of all the students.

The students shuffle the specific sentence cards and place them face-down in a pile on the desk.

Students take it in turns to pick up a specific sentence card from the pile and read it to the group, without showing the card to anyone.

The other group members listen and then race to find and read out the general sentence card that would come before the specific sentence.

The first player to read out the correct general sentence wins the round and keeps the specific sentence card.

The general sentence card is then placed back on the desk face-up for the next round.

The correct answer is shown for the reader on the sentence card.

If neither player gives the right answer, the specific sentence card is placed at the bottom of the pile to be used again later in the game.

This process continues until there are no more specific sentence cards left.

The player with the most cards at the end of the game is the winner.
