Introduction

In this adverbs of frequency activity, students play a true or false game and conduct a survey about how often they use English outside the classroom.

Procedure

Begin the activity by eliciting examples of how the students use English outside the classroom, e.g. texting a friend, etc.

Next, divide the class into groups of four.

Give each group four sets of cards.

Ask the students to take one set of cards each.

Tell the students to prepare true and false statements about how often they use English when doing the things shown on the cards, e.g. 'I write emails in English every day'. 'I often make phone calls in English'.

Each group then competes against another group in a true or false game (Team A and B).

A student from Team A chooses one of their cards and makes a true or false statement to Team B.

Team B guesses whether the statement is true or false. If Team B guesses correctly, they win a point.

A student from Team B then chooses one of their cards and makes a true or false statement to Team A and so on. This continues back and forth until all the cards have been used.

The team with the most points at the end of the game wins.

When the students have finished, tell them to stay in their original groups of four. Give each student a copy of the worksheet.

Under the column marked 'You', students answer how often they use English when doing the things shown on the worksheet.

Afterwards, tell them to write the names of the people in their group at the top of the three columns.

The students then ask the 'How often do you...?' questions to their group members and complete the worksheet with their answers.

When everyone has finished, ask the groups to give feedback to the class on their findings and discuss the results.
