Introduction

Here is a noun clauses board game to help students practice forming and using noun clauses to give noncommittal responses. In the game, students ask questions and score points by forming and using noun clauses to give noncommittal responses.

Procedure

Divide the class into groups of three or four.

Give each group a copy of the game board, a dice and counters.

Each student will also need a pen and paper for writing.

Students take turns rolling the dice and moving their counter along the board.

When a student lands on a square that contains a scrambled question, they unscramble the question and ask it to the group members, e.g. 'Who is that?'

The other group members then race to form a noncommittal response to the question using one of the sentence frames in the bank and a noun clause.

The first student to write an appropriate and grammatically correct response on their paper and say the reply wins, e.g. 'I don't know who that is.'

If it is the first time the winner has used that particular sentence frame, they score two points.

If the winner has used that sentence frame previously, they score one point.

Students are not allowed to repeat the same reply if a question is asked twice.

The first student to reach the 'finish' square scores an extra three points.

When a student reaches the finish, the game ends and everyone counts up their points.

The student with the highest score wins the game.
