Time

25 minutes

Introduction

Here is a fun making predictions game in which students predict a partner's future using the future simple form will and won't.

Procedure

Divide the students into pairs.

Give a copy of the worksheet to each student.

Tell the students that they are going to play a game where they make predictions about a partner's future using the future simple form will and won't.

The aim of the game is to make the most correct predictions.

Have the students read the predictions on the worksheet and think about their partner's future plans.

Students also write three more predictions of their own at the bottom of the worksheet.

In the 'true' column, students then write 'yes' if they think the prediction will come true or 'no' if they think it won't. They do this without consulting their partner.

If a student writes 'yes', they think of a reason why.

The students then take it in turns to tell their partner about their predictions and reasons using the future simple form will and won't.

Their partner tells them if their predictions are likely to be right or wrong.

If a prediction is correct, the student puts a tick in the box. If it's wrong, the student puts a cross.

The student with the most correct predictions wins the game.

A. Read the predictions and think about your partner's future. Write three more predictions of your own at the end. Then, in the 'True?' column, write 'yes' if you think the prediction will come true or 'no' if you think it won't. If you write 'yes', think of a reason why.

B. Now, take it in turns to tell your partner about your predictions and reasons using the future simple form will and won't. Put a tick if your prediction is right or a cross if it's wrong.
