Introduction

In this rewarding worksheet activity, students discuss ways to improve their English skills and practice using 'going to' for future intentions.

Procedure

Divide the students into groups of four.

Give each student a copy of the worksheet.

Tell the students to discuss and brainstorm how they could improve their English skills. The students then choose the best three ideas from their group and note these down on the worksheet.

Working alone, the students then choose six things that they are going to do to improve their English. They choose one idea from each category and write a sentence with 'going to', e.g. 'I'm going to speak English for one hour a day'.

When the students have finished, ask them to pair up with someone from another group.

The pairs of students then compare their ideas and give reasons for their choices.

Finally, find out which were the most popular ideas by getting feedback from around the class and see which students intend to try the ideas they wrote down.

A. In your group, discuss and brainstorm how you could improve your English. Write your three best ideas for each category in the spaces provided.
